Professional Summary

My background in higher education, theological scholarship, military chaplaincy, and public administration has given me a broad perspective on leadership, student-centered education, and faculty development. Having served as a chancellor, seminary president, professor, and doctoral advisor, I have worked in both traditional and online education, engaging in curriculum development, faculty mentorship, and institutional leadership. These experiences have shaped my commitment to lifelong learning, leadership formation, and public service. I look forward to the opportunity to bring these insights into a new setting where they can contribute meaningfully while also expanding my own professional growth in collaboration with colleagues and students.
